She reminded me quite a lot of Desmond. "What are you still doing here, Miss Tremaine? You should've left an hour ago." I sat at my desk, leaned back until the swivel chair groaned twice, and propped my feet up. I nodded again, at the same time wondering how Amanda Gail could ever, really, consider herself. Ralston laughed. It wasn't a bitter laugh; he sounded genuinely amused. Crawford plowed on. Crawford looked at it briefly, then squatted down beside the rest, wondering what all the fuss was about. Everyone looked very solemn, almost scared. But at dusk, when he returned to the bungalow, Mama Dolores greeted him at the door with a troubled face. That, in a nutshell, was Barry's problem. At last he had his license and could talk to anyone he wanted to talk to, but he didn't know what to talk about. He had no ideas of his own. He agreed with anything anyone said. The skit had been both essentially truthful and unjustifiably cruel. Too much sunbathing probably was dangerous. Porpoises probably were as smart as people. "Where were you climbing to?"
